In order to bill for services, Heritage must report certain personal information such as name, social security number, date of birth, gender, address, household income and family size, as well as relevant treatment information.

The cost of services at Heritage Behavioral Health Center is affected by several factors, including individual's income and number of dependants, referral source, type of services requested, insurance coverage, and eligibility for governmental assistance including the Department of Human Services (DHS), among others. Relying on these numerous funding sources, Heritage makes every effort to provide affordable services to its clientele. Heritage will apply a sliding fee to anyone with a family income at or below 200% of the federal poverty guidelines.
